Steven begins...

each piece on location with a model, and creates an initial series of sketches and/or photographs.

He then undergoes a lengthy process of examining and re-drawing and sometimes this leads to a second sitting with the model.

For sepia tone images I base my palette on the Grisaille method in which around nine shades are used to create an almost sculptural or hyper-realistic image.

I am very particular about the finish and to achieve my aims I use acrylic paints applied with a mix of airbrush and regular fine line brushes. I try to keep the surface as smooth as possible as once complete I lacquer the painting.
